

Carson Mansion & Ingomar Theatre: Cultural adventures in California

Introductory Remarks by JOHN W. CROMWELL Chairman LADIES and GENTLEMEN: Of those who have championed beyond their colleagues the rights and privileges that have come to us because of the Civil War, five names stand out in the last fifty years of our history. First, and leading all others is Abraham Lincoln, the Emancipator. The recent centenary celebrations held throughout the civilized world show that posterity will name him as the foremost statesman of the 19th century. Standing out in the legislative history of reconstruction is Thaddeus Stevens, who, strong of mind, inflexible of will, though weak in body, organized and directed the Congressional policy of reconstruction, resulting in the act of March 2, 1867, the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments. Had the original measures proposed and advocated by the Great Commoner prevailed many of the problems that now perplex and paralyze statesmen and worry politicians would never have presented themselves. Following Stevens, and building on citizenship and the franchise as accomplished facts, Charles Sumner emphasized the idea of civil rights. But before he could complete what he sought to accomplish by legislative enactment, he fell a victim to that brutality that fifteen years before had cowardly assailed him in the Senate Chamber. A compromise measure shorn of the most vital provisions for which he had contended finally became a law, only to be construed nine years after by the United States Supreme Court as unconstitutional and void. Against this opinion there was one dissenting voice strong and clear, in the interest of a broad interpretation of the Constitution and equality of civil rights by all citizens without regard to race or color. And ever since that memorable October of 1883, John Marshall Harlan has always rung true on all constitutional questions affecting our
