

Neolithic Settlement in Ireland and Western Britain

The past few years have seen an upsurge in the numbers of known Neolithic settlements in Ireland. Many of these sites have been excavated by archaeologists based in field units, but few are well-known to the wider archaeological community. The papers in this volume, which were presented at a conference held at Queens University Belfast in 2001, provided a forum for a discussion of the new Neolithic material from Ireland in its wider geographical context. Although the bulk of the emerging Irish settlement evidence relates to substantial houses, many of these papers consider wider themes, including issues of contact and communication along the sea routes and coastal margins of northwest Europe, questions of diversity and regional patterns of sedentism and mobility, and variations in regional food production strategies. The volume includes twenty-six papers representing a series of studies ranging geographically from Orkney to the French Atlantic facade. Contents: Introduction (Ian Armit, Eileen Murphy, Eimear Nelis and Derek Simpson); French Connections I: Spreading the marmites thinly (Alison Sheridan); French Connections II: Of cows and men (Anne Tresset); Contemplating some awful(ly interesting) vistas: Importing cattle and red deer into prehistoric Ireland (Peter Woodman and Margaret McCarthy); Terminology, time and space: Labels, radiocarbon chronologies and a Neolithic of small worlds (Patrick Ashmore); Rooted or routed?
