This book is a resource book for teachers who need further information to help them teach their students about the Ohlone Indians of Northern California. This unit is mandated in the History/Social Science Framework for California Public Schools and the History-Social Science Content Standards for Grade Three which says: 3.2 Students describe the American Indian nations in their local region long ago and in the recent past.

1. Describe national identities, religious beliefs, customs, and various folklore traditions.
2. Discuss the ways in which physical geography, including climate, influenced how the local Indian nations adapted to their natural environment (e.g., how they obtained food, clothing, tools).
3. Describe the economy and systems of government, particularly those with tribal constitutions, and their relationship to federal and state governments.
4. Discuss the interaction of new settlers with the already established Indians of the region.

The materials included in the book are for teachers to use as supplemental activities only. This book is not designed to be the core curriculum. Teachers should use their textbook and the secondary sources listed in the Resources for Further Study section at the end of this book to obtain the basic information about the Ohlone first, and then use the activities in this book to help teach the unit. It should be noted that older books sometimes refer to this tribe as the Costanoan Indians from a Spanish name for them, but most scholars and local Native Americans prefer the name Ohlone today.
