

Pathfinder: A conversation with Buck Hilton and other historical documents about Native American veterans.

Trained as paratroopers and advance scouts, the Pathfinders of World War II dropped into enemy territory one step ahead of Allied forces. Among these soldiers, American Indians like Buck Hilton served their country and carried on a tradition of military service extending for generations. This volume compiles articles and publications about the Native American veterans who served in the 82nd Airborne and other divisions during World War II, including a rare interview with Pathfinder Buck Hilton.
